

Just Say No! (Modeling – Assertiveness Training Worksheet)

The Wellness Professional will help the client practice saying no to a person and their favorite unhealthy treat. The Wellness Professional will take the role of the person the client has a hard time saying no to, and the client will have to repeat the following lines with the Wellness Professional.

Step 1:

The client will fill out the following information:

Think of a person you have a hard time saying no to: (Example: Mom, Best Friend, Spouse, Coworkers, Boss)

Person: _____

Think of your favorite unhealthy treat: (Example: Ice Cream, Nachos, Chips, Candy, Brownies)

Treat: _____

Think of your favorite or most likely place to get the treat listed above: (Ice Cream Store, Mexican Restaurant, Office Break room)

Place: _____

Write down your name as the person listed above would address you. (Example: Mom, Dad, Mike)

Client: _____

Think of your favorite physical activity – ending with “ing” (Example: Walking, Biking, Rock Wall Climbing, Golfing, Boxing)

Activity: _____

Just Say No! (Modeling – Assertiveness Training Worksheet)

Step 2:

Enter in the information identified from above into the blank spaces in the script below.

Step 3:

The Wellness Professional and the client will read the script together, as their identified roles. The Wellness Professional will review the key aspects of assertiveness (eye contact, body posture, gestures, facial expression, voice tone/inflection/volume, timing, and content) found in the Behavior Therapy chapter located under “Assertiveness Training” with the client. The client will practice using the key aspects of assertiveness while reading the script with the wellness professional.

Just Say No! – Assertiveness Training Practice Script

Wellness Professional:	Hi, _____ (Client). Let’s go get some _____ (Treat) at _____ (Place).
Client:	Thanks for the invite _____ (Person), but I’ve just started a nutrition program, so I am not going to be able to go to _____ (Place) and get _____ (Treat) with you today.
Wellness Professional:	Oh come on _____ (Client), you don’t need to go on a diet. It’s only one day out of your nutrition plan. Let’s get going.
Client:	Thanks, but no _____ (Person). This is important to me and I want to remain committed to this goal.
Wellness Professional:	How about you come with me and only just have a small taste. That would work, right?
Client:	No, _____ (Person) that will not work for me. I am going to have to remain firm on this, but I appreciate your invitation. How about we go _____ (Activity) together instead.

Just Say No! (Modeling – Assertiveness Training Worksheet)

Step 4:

The Wellness Professional will give the client feedback on their use of eye contact, body posture, gestures, facial expression, voice tone/inflection/volume, and content. Repeat the script as many times as necessary with the client until all aspects of assertiveness have been achieved.