

SETTING BOUNDARIES WORKSHEET

Instructions: Utilize this worksheet to help you create your professional boundaries and also communicate them with your clients in a friendly, professional way.

Why Boundaries Matter

Boundaries protect your energy, create consistency, and ensure clients receive the same high-quality coaching experience. Before setting them, reflect:

What problems arise when my boundaries are unclear?

Define Your Communication Boundaries

These determine when and how clients can reach you. Create a framework for your service or program and how you will handle client communication.

Preferred Hours for Client Messages: _____

Guaranteed Response Time: _____

Approved Communication Channels:

- ➔ Email
- ➔ Coaching App

Times I Do NOT Respond to Messages:

Personal Time Protection

It is important to create structured periods where you can take time away from your business. This is more of a check for yourself than it is for your clients so you can ensure you mentally create space between your work and your life.

This helps me give thoughtful, focused feedback that moves you forward.

After-Hours or Weekend Messages

Feel free to send messages anytime they come to mind. Just note that I'll respond during my regular coaching hours:

This helps me stay fully present and energized so I can support you at my best.

If Something Feels Urgent

If something comes up that feels important or time-sensitive, here's the best way to let me know:

To make sure you get the most out of coaching, it really helps when you:

(Examples: sending check-ins on time, asking questions when you're unsure, giving honest updates.)
