

TARGET AUDIENCE EXAMPLE

Who are they?

- Demographics: Male, ages 35–50, married with children, working full-time (often in corporate or entrepreneurial roles), middle to upper-middle income, suburban
- Identities: Busy dad, former athlete, health-conscious but inconsistent, values family time and productivity

What do they want?

- Primary goal: Lose 20–30 lbs. of body fat, regain energy, feel confident in their body again.
- Top desires: More energy for their kids, improved self-image, better performance at work and in life.
- Daily frustrations: Lack of time, low motivation, inconsistent routines, confusion about what actually works

What challenges do they face?

- Biggest problem: Struggling to lose weight despite trying multiple diets and workouts
- Keeps them up at night: Fear of long-term health issues, feeling like they're letting themselves or their family down
- Embarrassment: Avoiding pool parties or photos with their kids due to body image concerns
- Cost of inaction: Weight gain continues, energy declines, potential health risks increase
- Urgent issue: Need a sustainable plan that fits their lifestyle and delivers results without extreme measures

How do they think and behave?

- Complaints: “I don’t have time,” “I’ve tried everything,” “I just want something that works”
- Biggest mistake: Jumping between fad diets and intense workout plans without consistency or support.
- Steps to success:
 1. Simplify nutrition with realistic guidelines
 2. Incorporate short, effective workouts
 3. Build accountability and structure
 4. Track progress without obsessing
 5. Adjust based on feedback and lifestyle

TARGET AUDIENCE EXAMPLE

Where do they spend their attention?

- Influencers: Follow fitness personalities like Andy Frisella, Joe Rogan, or Mark Bell; listen to podcasts on productivity and health
- Competitors:
 1. Precision Nutrition
 2. Fit Father Project

What micro-problems do they face?

- Skipping breakfast or overeating at night
- Drinking too much on weekends
- Lack of sleep due to stress or parenting
- Inconsistent gym attendance
- Feeling guilty about self-care
- Not knowing what to eat
- Comparing themselves to younger, fitter peers
- Feeling overwhelmed by conflicting advice
- Losing motivation after a few weeks
- Struggling to balance work, family, and fitness
- Not seeing results fast enough
- Feeling unsupported or misunderstood
- Avoiding social events due to body image
- Getting injured from jumping into intense workouts
- Feeling like they're starting over every Monday
- Not knowing how to track progress
- Feeling judged or ashamed
- Not having a clear plan
- Relying on caffeine to get through the day
- Feeling like fitness is selfish or indulgent