

Trust Breakdowns

Breakdown	Description	✓
1. Being too technical with your skills	Thinking too much about how to complete a good swing. Stuck in the practice mindset instead of just playing.
2. Over-controlling your strokes	Trying too hard to complete a good swing. Steering, guiding, or overthinking your shots. Trying hard to control the swing.
3. Indecision with shot selection	Being unsure about club selection, target, or type of shot to hit. Second-guessing your line during putting.
4. Perfectionism	Trying too hard to be perfect with your swing. Wanting your swing or stroke to feel right, look good, and hit the target.
5. Overanalysis	Thinking about why you missed a shot or putt and overthinking how to change or fix it during a round.
6. Lack of confidence	Lack of full confidence in your ability to make a good swing. Not believing that your swing is good enough during play.
7. Fear of failure; anxiety or worry	Fear of not playing well, losing, or disappointing others. Feeling anxious, tense, or worried about results.
8. Outcome-thinking	Thinking about your score, placement in field, or aftermath of the tournament.
