

Identifying Reasons for a Stall in Progress

- ☐ Are weekly averages in body weight (rather than individual weigh-ins) being compared?
- ☐ Has body weight remained unchanged for at least 2 consecutive check-ins (i.e. 3 weeks total)?
- ☐ Has the client reported loss of adherence over the past few weeks?
- ☐ Has the client reported any episodes of overeating or binge eating?
- ☐ Has the client had any social events that may have led to increased calorie intake?
- ☐ Has dietary intake changed based on food records (e.g. calories, food diary, photos)?
- ☐ Is the client recording intake accurately (e.g. accounting for beverages such as coffee)?
- ☐ Have normal physical activity levels decreased in the past few weeks?
- ☐ Has the client been dieting consistently for more than 12 weeks? (if so, consider diet break)
- ☐ Is there an obvious source of stress in the client's life right now?
- ☐ Has the client recently (past few weeks) taken up resistance training?

If the practitioner can run through the entire checklist without identifying any potential problems, then it is likely that the client simply needs to reduce their calorie intake.
